"A daring furniture element, with a unique scenic effect"

Designed by Anton Christell & Emanuel Gargano

"A daring furniture element, with a unique scenic effect " Table made in multiply with a 1 cm. veneer of antique reclaimed oak, aged between 80 and 350 years, left in a raw state, ancient, where veins, cracks, knots and imperfections become the specific and characterizing feature of this table. At a first glance, the table conveys values such as: tradition, craftsmanship and authenticity, words which are in keeping with Amura brand. The top is divided in two parts, and supported by one or more bases, depending on the size. The varnished metal bases hark back to the "A" for Amura, clearly recognizable in the logo, and further to the curves of the traditional cobblestones street of the South of Italy. This table is a daring furniture element, with a unique scenic effect. Its particular design makes it perfect either for rustic, modern or ultra-contemporary ambient. The absolute protagonist of the kitchen or the dining room.
